

The Mountain Advocate.

NEW SERIES: VOLUME 12; No. 24

BARBOURVILLE, KY., FRIDAY, APRIL 14, 1922

ONE DOLLAR AND FIFTY CENTS A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THE MOUNTAIN ADVOCATE OFFERS TO BOYS AND GIRLS

The Mountain Advocate is interested in the agricultural development of Knox County and with that end in view is making a SPECIAL OFFER to the Boys and Girls Agricultural Clubs of the County. It is as follows:

That members of the different clubs shall take subscriptions thru the county for the Mountain Advocate at the usual price of $1.50 per year and shall send the subscriptions and names of subscribers to the office of the Mountain Advocate, which in turn, will take 50c of each $1.50 and place same in a fund to pay the way of boys and girls chosen by the different clubs to represent them at the annual Junior Week to be held under the auspices of the University of Kentucky, Lexington, June 19 to 24.

Last year 176 boys and girls attended the meetings and this year it is expected that 300 will be present. We believe the boys and girls will profit largely thru these meetings and that the county will be the better off for what they learn there. We are working in conjunction with Messrs. J. M. Feltner, of London, District Agent of the Boys and Girls Agricultural Clubs, and Earl Mayhew, local County Agent.

We trust citizens of the county will do their share in helping the boys and girls of their different sections by subscribing for the Mountain Advocate, and at the same time will enjoy the newspaper which has received the approving good-will of all who now are subscribers.

We are developing a plan also by which any excess money received thru this method may be used to send boys and girls to the Kentucky State Fair to be held in Louisville this fall.

It should be understood that the Advocate cannot be issued for $1.00 a year which will be the real price we receive for it under the rules of this offer, but we are anxious to help the boys and girls of the county and at the same time make our people better acquainted with the home paper—The Mountain Advocate.

Besides the excellent news we carry, the paper is now well printed as we have installed a new press this year, which does fine work. We scrapped the old press because we felt that the print did not measure up to what it should. The boys and girls will therefore have no need to feel ashamed of the appearance of the Advocate and may indeed make its clear print, as well as its newness, one of their strong selling points.

The cost of sending a boy or girl to Lexington will be $16.08 and it will therefore be necessary to secure 33 subscriptions for each member of the different clubs who may be chosen to go.

EPISCOPAL SERVICE

Episcopal service with celebration of Holy Communion will be held in the Presbyterian Church at 11 a. m. Sunday. This is the regular Easter service and all are welcome.

To those who bear a heavy load
Of sorrow, pain or care,
May Easter come with blessed hope
And help those ill to bear.

To those whose favored lot in life
Seems crowned with blessings rare,
May Easter whisper, "Seek the poor"—
Their griefs and trials share.

To those who, near the heart's smart
Of wrong unjustly borne,
May Easter bring the grace of Him
Who wore the crown of thorn.

SWEETHEART

You can't be sweetheart and the slave both. The most menial of all household duties is washing clothes. Even in the day of slavery only the unfortunates, unfit for better work, were assigned to this labor. If wives are going to be real sweethearts to their husbands, as is their duty, they should be wise enough to send their washing to us. With our four classes of service, Damp Wash, 5cts a lb.; Rough Dry, 9cts a lb.; Family Finish and Dry Cleaning, we are well equipped to serve the most exacting customers. A LITERARY HONOR

Mr. Ethan Viall has just received the information that the publishers of the Encyclopedia Britannica that his articles or treatises on "Machine Tools," "Thermit and Thermit Welding" and "Welding by Gas Torch" will be printed in the new edition. The last or 11th edition contained 28 volumes and this, the 12th, will have 30 or more volumes. The work of Mr. Viall will cover some ten pages. All the articles published in the Encyclopedia Britannica must be specially written and copyrighted.

"ROSEMARY" TONIGHT.

KIWANIS ORGANIZED

In order to organize Barbourville Kiwanis in proper style, a special train hearing members from the clubs in Middlesboro and Pineville arrived here Tuesday night at 7:30. The train was met at the depot by a large delegation of citizens and the band. To the tootling of many horns and the beating of the drum with now and then a burst of song, the jolly crowd marched up to the Public Square where street carnival was held and then the line formed again and marched on to Union College to gather in the spacious diningroom where J. E. Archer was waiting with his force of helpers to spread the eats. And then the band played.

Hal Mould, district organizer, was chairman and after everyone introduced himself and the count was made showing 133 seated at table to say nothing of the band and group of efficient waiters, the attendance prizes were awarded to Mayor T. D. Tinsley and James Kauffman, being big boxes of fat cigars. Safety razors were found at each plate being silent boosters for Rogan Bros. Co., hardware, S. M. Reams, Middlesboro, Manager. A bowl of fragrant lilacs centered each table, the same flower and dogwood decorating the room.

Dr. Franklin made a little pithy speech of welcome. He said that we have had so many forms and ceremonies that we have almost lost our humanity and these gatherings for merrymaking are needed to stir us up. Rev. Sam Martin, a Middlesboro Kiwanian, well known in Barbourville, then told of some of the things accomplished by the organization in that city. Two members of the recently organized club of Corbin were present and L. R. Reams, already a famous booster, made a fine talk even bragging on Corbin.

Tom Wallace, editorial writer for the Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky., said that from a spirit of romance his profession have rather overdone a sort of publicity for this section, not because our deeds are angular, but because our part of the country is beautiful and interesting. Now he intends to give us attention and fight with us for good roads.

White L. Moss, who is in the pink of condition after his strenuous time in Frankfort, then spoke and talked. Did you ask what his subject was? Good Roads, of course, Nuf sed.

Naturally all this time Hal Mould was giving little talks of the work of Kiwanis and he now took the floor with that as his only subject saying many things. Fellowship, acquaintance, assistance, play and lots of well directed work are all features of the Kiwanis and everything that goes to make your town, your county and our broad land a better place in which to live. Is the work of the organization. Its great advantage over the purely local business organization is that it has the broader, community of interests.

The Barbourville men were then signed up and more than the necessary fifty having been secured, a nominating committee presented the following list of officers which was adopted as a whole:

T. D. Tinsley, president, H. H. Owens, vice-president, H. M. Oldfield, secretary and W. R. Lay, treasurer.

Board of Directors:
Robert W. Cole, Dan Herrington, Jim Jarvis, C. L. Banks, L. L. Richardson, Josh Tye, Guy L. Dickinson, R. N. Jarvis, and A. M. Decker, Sr., trustee.

George Seeling will be here next Tuesday to meet with the men and instruct them in the working of the committees. A district meeting will be held in Pineville May 2nd and all the clubs will send enthusiastic delegations.

We want to congratulate our band on the splendid music they are producing. The expressions of praise on the part of the visitors were unlimited both as to the way the music is rendered and as to its selection. They played piece after piece furnishing a great deal of pleasure. We are proud of our band.

"JUNE"

4-Act Comedy-Drama

This play, to be given in Union College Auditorium April 17 under the able direction of Miss Mildred Murphy, has a very interesting group of young people. June is an appealing little figure, an orphan living with her aunt. There are a number of delightful, life-like characters: the sorely tried, likable Mrs. Hopkins, the amusing, but haughty Miss Banks of the glove department, the lively Tilly and Milly, who work in the store, and ambitious Snoozer; and Mrs. Hopkins only son, who aspires to be President of the United States but finds his real sphere is running the local trolley car.

These various characters will be presented by the following young people:

Mrs. Susan Hopkins, Flossie Turner; Marion Hopkins, her daughter, Evelyn Black; June Rose, the orphan niece of Mrs. Hopkins, Ethel Miller; Miss Banks, forelady of the glove department, Reeta Fish; Topsy, Mrs. Hopkins' servant, Cecil Blythe; Jen, Tilly and Milly, Ruby Main, Irene Carnes and Verda Viall; Jim Armstrong, Josh Faulkner; Fred Benton, Robert Lee; Snoozer, Jackie Howard; Abraham Poindexter, porter at the store, Charles Heldrick.

GOOD FRIDAY

Today is Good Friday.
Behold the Man!
On the Hill of Calvary there is a Cross:
On the Cross is a Man.
He wears a crown of thorns.
His arms are outstretched;
Nails pierce His hands and feet.
On His brow is the sweat of agony.
"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."
"My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"
"I thirst!"
They give Him vinegar to drink.
On either side are two thieves:
Even in His agony He thinks of them.
"Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."
"Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit."
"They thrust a spear into His side
And forthwith came there out blood and water."
Behold the Man!
Is it nothing to ye who pass by?
That this is the Christ,
The Son of God,
Hearing your sins?
That in Him ye might have life eternal.
Agonizing for you, dying for you,
That thru Him ye might see and know the Father.
He, the Perfect One, lying in the corruption of the tomb.
That thru His death should lose its sting.
And the grave its victory
Behold the Man!
Behold the Christ!
Behold the Son of God!
Your Man! Your Christ! Your Brother!
Thru the agony, the blood and the sweat of this day,
Is it nothing to ye who pass by?

NEW ADDITION TO THE CITY

John M. Tinsley is having Liberty Street extended to the river and lots laid off for sale. These will make fine residence lots as they are above high water. Mr. Tinsley intends building a bungalow for himself on one of these lots. The Government last fall purchased a front lot from him, the corner lot on Liberty and Dishman Streets, for a post-office building in the future.

SEARS

The death of Mr. W. E. Sears, 75 years of age, a respected resident of Bryant Store, occurred on Monday, March 27th. Deceased, who was an old pioneer, was born in Vanley County and came to Knox County about forty years ago. He was a consistent member of the Baptist Church. His life was spent on a farm.

Three sons and two daughters survive; Jason, John and Siler B. and Mrs. Amanda Jones, of Dayton, Ohio, and Mrs. Phoebe Bryant, of Corbin.

The funeral was held in the Croley Graveyard, Tuesday, March 28th a large concourse of friends being in attendance.

GOLDEN TALKS TO LION MEETING

"The past tragedy of allowing lawlessness to haptize this whole section in blood is now exacting its penalty," said Capt. B. B. Golden last night in explaining present conditions here. Capt. Golden was the chief speaker at the Lion banquet held in the M. E. Church, South, club rooms.

"It is my sole desire to serve the people," said Capt. Golden, "and my greatest wish to arouse the citizenship to themselves, to make them realize their true greatness, to get back on the job, to rid themselves of shiftlessness and slacker traits. We have come to the parting of the ways. Either the good or the bad must rule. We can have law enforcement if we really want it. This gathering of Lions can hasten the day of law and order if they will go home with a new song on their lips, a new prayer in their hearts and a new determination in their minds to bring about right conditions." — Middlesboro Daily News.

THE VICTORY WAY

Is A Combined Insurance Policy and Savings Account

Come in and investigate this splendid method. Will you need $1000 ten years from now? If you die before ten years, will your wife or children need the $1000? If so you had better see us at once.

You make small monthly payments into a savings account, which covers insurance and accumulates funds for your use. In ten years you will deposit $912.20 we will pay you $1000. If you die before you have deposited more than one installment we will pay your family $1000.

If you live the ten years we will pay you the $1000. But you think, suppose I do not want to keep up the account for that long. Well, you can quit any time and we will pay you all money you have deposited and interest on same, less the small premium paid to the Insurance Company for your protection.

You think—Suppose I failed to make deposit when due, would I lose what I have saved? No. You can withdraw your savings any time, or you can make up your lost payments any time during the year.

YOU CAN'T LOSE. Come in and let us explain this splendid savings system to you fully.

METHODIST CHURCH

The services next Sunday will be in keeping with the day, Easter.
Special music has been planned and will be rendered by an enlarged choir. Rev. Carl Vogel, who has been assisting the pastor for the past three weeks in a revival, will preach at 11 and 7:15. The sacrament of baptism will be administered at both services and a large class of new members will be received. Prayer meeting next Wednesday evening at 7:15. Cottage prayer meeting on Friday night.

METHODIST LADIES AID

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church met with Mrs. Dr. Will Black April 7th. Twenty-eight members were present and answered roll call with quotations on duty. Visitors were Mrs. Carl E. Vogel, Miss Hubbard, Mrs. B. P. Jones and Mrs. Jake Rasnick. After the usual business session Mrs. Chas. R. Mitchell and Mrs. Oscar Jackson read a sketch on duty. Delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Dan Humfleet, Apr. 21.

WORK ENDORSED

Indorsement of the work of the newly organized Kentucky Livestock Association was given at the Annual meeting of the Kentucky Farm Federation Bureau held in Louisville last week. Resolutions to this effect were prepared and passed.

The new association is the merger of all the livestock interests in the state including the Kentucky Purebred Livestock Association. The first activity of this organization will be The Third Farmer's Better Sire Sale to be held at the Bourbon Stock Yards, Thursday, May 4th, when 100 purebred bulls, of shorthorn, Hereford and Angus breeds, will be offered to the farmers of the state at auction. When the new organization is perfected, these sales will be held in different sections of the state, eliminating considerable expense of shipping individual animals any distance.

In a letter to W. S. Bell, president of the Louisville Livestock Exchange Wayland Rhodes, beef production specialist of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, is of the opinion that there will be a great demand for purebred bulls this year, comparatively more than there was last year.
Mr. Rhodes has made strenuous efforts in the past several years to get the farmers of Kentucky to produce better beef showing the importance of this work if the farmers are to realize a profit out of their livestock. He further stated that all the county agents will lend their assistance in making the coming better sires sales a success.

SILVERS

The death of Mr. Hiram Silvers, 46 years of age, superintendent of the Creech Coal Co., of Wallins Creek, Harlan County, occurred at that place Thursday, April 6th, from apoplexy. He was buried Friday in the city cemetery. Rev. John Owen Gross, of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Masonic Lodge having charge of the funeral. He leaves a wife and one child.

The sympathy of the people of Barbourville will be with the bereaved relatives in their deep sorrow.

attention and, as Francis is a good patient, we hope to see her out soon as spry as ever.

We feel that every citizen of the hard ground is all being broken up and treated with lime before the grass seed is sown. Let us all respect this work and keep on the walks.

cidentally fired destroying the right eye of each young man and weakening the left also, besides flecking their faces with permanent powder stains.

SNAKES HAVE LARGE 'LITTERS'

Boa Constrictor, in Captivity, Gave Birth to Sixty-Four Living Young —Others Prolific.

The sixteen-foot Trinidad anaconda, or water boa, at the London Zoological gardens, not long ago gave birth to twenty-four young ones. The newborn snakes were twenty-six inches long and about an inch in diameter at the thickest part of the body.
In color and marking they resembled the adults—that is, they were of a dark greenish hue with black spots.

That number of young had been exceeded by a seventeen-foot snake at the New York Zoological park, which produced thirty-four young. Still another anaconda has been known to produce thirty-seven at a birth, and a large specimen of boa constrictor gave birth to sixty-four living young. The pythons differ from the boas in that they lay eggs and coil around a heap of them until they hatch. An official of the New York Zoo says that the pythons produce from fifty to a hundred eggs at a time, and a specimen of python reticulatus deposited sixty eggs, about which she coiled, and from which she fought off all intruders, but her efforts proved of no avail, for the eggs were infertile.

Christ The Lord Is Risen Today

Meet the joyous news to spread:
Christ is risen from the dead!
Let the stone be rolled away:
Christ the Lord is risen today!

went on, deprecatingly, "that I haven't seen the church yet. I ought to go there first and look around."

"Of course we will take you there this afternoon," volunteered the minister.

"And you can have my horse and wagon every afternoon," added Mrs. Perry, warmly, "my boy Tommy to drive and help."

"It will be beautiful," Mrs. Perry murmured—"like the world seemed when I was young." She was not thinking of the decoration now, but of the beautiful thing of not being forgotten that had come so unexpectedly to her. The minister gazed at her a moment, and then again turned to the window.

"There will be no failure in the church decoration," he remarked aside to Mrs. Perry.

Nor was there, nor in the beautiful thing that had come to the little old woman. During the decorating she was like a different creature, and her face came to be scarcely recognizable as that which had looked so deprecatingly at them that afternoon at the poor farm. When it was all over the minister went to her impulsively and grasped both her hands.

"I cannot tell you how much you have helped me," he said earnestly. "The decoration has been a perfect success, and it is all owing to you. But there is another thing I wish to speak about. My housekeeper is about to leave, and I need some one to take her place. Will you come and look after the parsonage—and me, too, for that matter?" with one of his frank, boyish smiles. "My mother always said I wasn't capable of looking after my clothes and such things. I will try not to tax you too severely."

So the beautiful thing which had come to her was not of a day, but was to last through all the remainder of her years.

CHINESE IN CELEBRATION

Lines of Chinese, clad in garments ranging from the frock coat and "till" of western ultra-civilization to the gorgeous silks of the Orient, marched last Easter Sunday in a great religious procession through San Francisco's Chinatown. The pageant and procession were followed by union services. Baptist, Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian and Episcopal church missions in Chinatown organized the celebration.

A feature of the day was the choral singing by young Chinese girls.

RESURRECTION

"He is risen! Would you know him, in the early light of morn;
As the seals of sin were broken,
And grim Death of strength was behorn?"

"He is risen! Would you know him,
If you met your risen Lord?
Would his loving, gentle accents
In your heart find avast accord?"

"Then, if He to you is risen,
On this Holy Easter Day;
O'er sin, and death and sorrow
You will triumph, in His way."
—Selected.

To Welcome Easter.

Let us welcome Easter with joy. It is a day of commemoration of our redemption from sin and death, and which gives assurance of our immortality. Let us bring our tributes of roses and lilies, violets and jonquils and hyacinths, perfect first-fruits of earth's rarest blossoms of the spring-time, and types of the cleansed, purified perfection which we ourselves will show forth when we are "risen with Him," who is the Resurrection and the Life.

The Eskimo's Gift

By MALCOLM BROWN

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

The arctic had yielded up its long sought secret as to the location of the magnetic pole. The "Catherine" had returned, but of the twenty-nine who had sailed in her the year before only fifteen returned. And Lieutenant Andrews led them, for Captain Scoville had died in a snow crevice.

Andrews and Scoville had been alone at the time of the disaster, except for an Eskimo, who had been brought back to New York. These three had been separated from the rest of the party by forty miles of ice and snow. Lieutenant Andrews and his boy returned to the ship, and the lieutenant reported the catastrophe. Help had been impossible. Scoville had slipped over the edge and fallen under an avalanche of snow, a hundred feet beneath.

It became known that Catherine Maynard had been sought in marriage by the captain and the lieutenant also. Whispers flew, suspicions grew. Instead of the reception such as a hero should receive, Lieutenant Andrews was robbed of his triumph and shunned by all. They said that he had killed Scoville.

Andrews knew what was said, but he had his duty to perform. He carried the news to Catherine.

"He slipped on the very edge of the precipice," Andrews explained. "In an instant he was gone, down the sheer rocky sides of the mountain. He was killed instantly, and buried under the snow. Rescue was impossible."

"I know," said Catherine Maynard, holding out her hands to him. "You could have done nothing."

Andrews knew then that she had heard the rumors.

"I cannot ask you what I should wish to ask until I have cleared myself," he said sadly, and went away.

He was a dishonored man. On all sides enemies rose up against him. "Let somebody who can speak Eskimo question the boy," said his enemies. "Then we shall know the truth."

Andrews made answer, his only answer.

"Put the boy to school," he said. "I'll be his English teacher, and let him be asked the truth."

Andrews lived in a little cottage in Maine.

The Eskimo boy was being educated at a public school.

All the while Catherine Maynard fought with her pride. She knew that Andrews loved her, but she could never speak unless he told her. He did not come, and at last love conquered pride. She wrote to him. When Andrews received Catherine's letter he had to make his decision: Either to go back and face his calamity or to go into exile. He chose. He went back to Catherine.

"Catherine," he said, drawing her into his arms. "I must tell you now, I love you."

"Yes, dear," she answered simply, and raised her lips to his.

That was the manner of Andrews' return to his world, and to his astonishment he found that all the doors which had been closed against him were open again.

Wun-tuk-haw, the Eskimo, or John, as he had come to be called, could now speak English fairly well. He was a frequent caller at Maynard's home. In spite of the professors, he was able to give a very clear account of the accident, which utterly banished all shadow of suspicion. If such had ever existed, from the admiral's mind.

"John," said Catherine, "Lieutenant Andrews and I are going to be married."

"Good," grinned the Eskimo. "In my country we give present when man get married to woman."

"To think, dearest, that tomorrow we shall begin our life together!" whispered Catherine, as they sat together in the house.

"Mr. John, Miss Maynard," announced the old butler.

John came smiling into the room.

"In my country give marriage present night before," he said, extending a small package. "Not for you, Miss Catherine—for Lieutenant Andrews," he continued.

Andrews tore it open. Inside was a magnificent pearl necklace, and with it, a sheet of note paper in Scoville's writing. Catherine saw it and grew as pale as death.

"What's this, John?" asked Andrews quickly.

"Captain Scoville give him to me," answered the Eskimo. "He say to me, 'Bye-bye Lieutenant Andrews get married. Then you give this to him. Not give to girl, give to him. You say nothing till he ready to get married.'"

"Catherine, dear, do you think you had better read it?" asked her lover.

"Yes, dearest," she answered bravely. They read it together.

"My dear Andrews," (it ran).

"If you marry Miss Maynard, as I hope and believe, give her this necklace as a last gift to her from one who will not see her again. God bless you both, my dear friend."

"JOHN SCOVILLE."

Catherine looked at Andrews and her eyes were full of tears.

"He loved me," she whispered. "He all hat asked me. But he knew—he knew that it was you. And he—"

"He did not mean to return," said Andrews huskily.

"Do you see what that letter means, dear?" she continued.

"It means," answered the lieutenant, "my vindication."

NEWSPAPER GIVES FORTUNE IN PRIZES

'Autobobles are to be given away with a lavish hand, according to an announcement just made by The Louisville Herald. More than $25,000 in prizes are included in the list of awards to be distributed among men and women of Kentucky and adjoining states, and people from all sections are entering the gift campaign that is attracting such wide attention.

The automobiles to be given away are fourteen in number. They include a $3,885.75 Marmou, $3,375 Cadillac, $1,699 Haynes, $1,515 Chalmers, $1,605 Nash, $1,355 Hupmobile, $1,195 Essex, $1,150 Studebaker, $1,095 Columbia, $1,030 Buick, $970 Marwell, $890 Durant $625 Overland and $598 Chevrolet.

The plan of the gift campaign is such that the winners of the automobiles and other prizes are to be decided by votes. Those who secure the highest number of votes will be the lucky ones to become the owners of high-powered motor cars of the latest models.

Several of the largest newspapers of the country have recently conducted similar campaigns, with the result that thousands of people have become interested in the fortunes of those who participated and secured automobiles gratis. The Louisville Herald in inaugurating its campaign has arranged a prize list that is the greatest in the history of Kentucky Journalism, and it is expected that there will be many eager ones to share in this generous distribution of a fortune in prizes.

MOUNTAIN FARMING PAYS

John W. Goodman, Jr., County Agent of Avery County, North Carolina, in a recent article laments that mountain farming will pay as well as that conducted elsewhere, providing the proper crops suited to the mountain regions are planted and cared for.

The point for a man to keep in mind is to adjust his crops and livestock to the size and condition of his farm. Co-operate with the Marketing Association and a good living is assured. For his section he recommends birdseye beans, onions, poultry, sheep and cattle, both beef and dairy.

We may add that apples, peaches, pears and small fruits, given proper attention, will add largely to the income of the farmer and, when they are grown in sufficient quantities, will be eagerly snapped up by large buyers. The growing of truck will mean the establishment of canneries for tomatoes, beans, sweet corn, as well as the fruits above mentioned.

We urge every thoughtful citizen to get behind Mr. Mayhew, our own County Agent, take an interest in his work and at the same time talk and boost for fruit and truck culture in the county as well as sheep, dairy and beef cattle, chickens, and everything else that will tend to make for better returns for the farm worker. Even if from a selfish standpoint, it is worth while, since the more prosperous the farmer the more prosperous the whole community in which he lives.

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

(Reprinted from Atlantic Monthly)

Some farmers favored by regional compactness and contiguity, such as the citrus-fruit-raisers of California, already have found a way legally to merge and sell their products integrally and in accordance with seasonal and local demand, thus improving their position and rendering the consumer a reliable service of ensured quality, certain supply, and reasonable and relatively steady prices. They have not found it necessary to resort to any special privilege, or to claim any exemption under the anti-trust legislation of the state or nation. Without removing local control, they have built up a very efficient marketing agency. The grain, cotton, and tobacco farmers, and the producers of hides and wool, because of their numbers and the vastness of their regions, and for other reasons, have found integration a more difficult task; though there are now some thousands of farmer's co-operative elevators, warehouses, creameries, and other enterprises of one sort and another, with a turn-over of a billion dollars a year. They are giving the farmers business experience and training, and, so far as they go, they meet the need of honest weighing and fair grading; but they do not meet the requirements of rationally adjusted marketing in any large and fundamental way.

The next step, which will be a pattern for other groups, is now being prepared by the grain-raisers through the establishment of sales media which shall handle grain separately or collectively, as the individual farmer may elect. It is this step—the plan of the Committee of Seventeen—which has created so much opposition and is thought by some to be in conflict with the anti-trust laws. Though there is now before congress a measure designed to clear up doubt on this point, the grain-producers are not relying on any immunity from anti-trust legislation. They desire, and they are entitled, to co-ordinate their efforts just as effectively as the large business interests of the country have done. In connection with the selling organizations the United States Grain Growers Incorporated is drafting a scheme of financing instrumentalities and auxiliary agencies which are indispensable to the successful utilization of modern business methods.

It is essential that the farmers should proceed gradually with these plans, and aim to avoid the error of scrapping the existing marketing machinery, which has been so laboriously built up by long experience, before they have a tried and proved substitute or supplementary mechanism. They must be careful not to become enmeshed in their own reforms and lose the perspective of their place in the national system. They must guard against fanatical devotion to new doctrines, and should seek articulation with the general economic system rather than its reckless destruction as it relates to them.

To take a tolerant and sympathetic view of the farmers' strivings for better things is not to give a blanket endorsement to any specific plan, and still less to applaud the vagaries of some of their leaders and groups. Neither should we, on the other hand, allow the froth of bitter agitation, false economies, and mistaken radicalism to conceal the facts of the farmers' disadvantages, and the practicability of eliminating them by well-considered measures. It may be that the farmers will not show the business sagacity and develop the wise leadership to carry through sound plans; but that possibility does not justify the obstruction of their upward efforts. We, as city people, see in high and speculatively manipulated prices, spoilage, waste, scarcity, the results of defective distribution of farm products. Should it not occur to us that we have a common interest with the farmer in his attempts to attain a degree of efficiency in distribution corresponding to his efficiency in production? Do not the recent fluctuations in the May wheat option, apparently unrelated to normal interaction of supply and demand, offer a timely proof of the need of some such stabilizing agency as the grain growers have in contemplation?

It is contended that, if their proposed organizations be perfected and operated, the farmers will have in their hands an instrument that will be capable of dangerous abuse. We are told that it will be possible to pervert it to arbitrary and oppressive price-fixing from its legitimate use of ordering and stabilizing the flow of farm products to the market, to the mutual benefit of producer and consumer. I have no apprehensions on this point.

In the first place, a loose organization, such as any ancol of farmers must be at best, cannot be so arbitrarily and promptly controlled as a great corporation. The one is a lumbering democracy and the other an agile autocracy. In the second place, with all possible power of organization, the farmers cannot succeed to any great extent, or for any considerable length of time, in fixing prices. The great law of supply and demand works in various and surprising ways, to the undoing of the best laid plans that attempt to foil it. In the third place, their power will avail the farmers nothing if it be misused. In our time and country power is of value to its possessor only so long as it is not abused. It is fair to say that I have seen no signs in responsible quarters of a disposition to dictate prices. There seems, on the contrary, to be a commonly beneficial purpose to realize a stability that will give an orderly and abundant flow of farm products to the consumer and ensure reasonable and dependable returns to the producer.

In view of the supreme importance to the national well-being of a prosperous and contented agricultural population, we should be prepared to go a long way in assisting the farmers to get an equitable share of the wealth they produce, through the inauguration of reforms that will procure a continuous and increasing stream of farm products. They are far from getting a fair share now. Considering his capital and the long hours of labor put in by the average farmer and his family, he is remunerated less than any other occupational class, with the possible exception of teachers, religious and lay. Though we know that the present general distress of the farmers is exceptional and is linked with the inevitable economic readjustment following the war, it must be remembered that, although representing one-third of the industrial product and half the total population of the nation, the rural communities ordinarily enjoy but a fifth to a quarter of the net annual national gain. Notwithstanding the taste of prosperity that the farmers had during the war, there is today a lower standard of living among the cotton farmers of the South than in any other pursuit in the country.

In conclusion, it seems to me that the farmers are chiefly striving for a generally beneficial integration of their business, of the same kind and character that other business enjoys. If it should be found on examination that the attainment of this end requires methods different from those which other activities have followed for the same purpose should we not sympathetically consider the plan for the right to co-operate, if only from our own enlightened self interest, in obtaining an abundant and steady flow of farm products?

In examining the agricultural situation with a view to its improvement, we shall be most helpful if we maintain a detached and judicial viewpoint, remembering that existing wrongs may be chiefly an accident of unsymmetrical economic growth instead of a creation of malevolent design and conspiracy. We Americans are prone, as Professor David Friday well says in his admirable book, "Profits, Wages and Prices," to seek a "criminal intent behind every difficult and undesirable economic situation." I can positively assert from my contact with men of large affairs, including bankers, that, as a whole, they are endeavoring to fulfill as they see them the obligations that go with their power. Preoccupied with the grave problems and heavy tasks of their own immediate affairs, they have not turned their thoughtful personal attention or their constructive abilities to the deficiencies of agricultural business organization. Agriculture, it may be said, suffers from their preoccupation and neglect rather than from any purposeful exploitation by them. They ought now to begin to respond to the farmers' difficulties, which they must realize are their own.

On the other hand, my contacts with the farmers have filled me with respect for them—for their sanity, their patience, their balance. Within the last year, and particularly at a meeting called by the Kansas State Board of Agriculture and at another called by the Committee of Seventeen, I have met many of the leaders of the new farm movement, and I testify in all sincerity that they are endeavoring to deal with their problems, not as promoters of a narrow class interest, not as exploiters of the hapless consumer, not as merciless monopolists, but as honest men bent on the improvement of the common weal.

We can and must meet such men and such a cause half way. Their business is our business—the nation's business.

Roosevelt a Bird Lover.

Roosevelt's first appearance in the editorial columns of a New York newspaper was probably that in the Evening Post of February 25, 1878. Roosevelt was then a sophomore at Harvard, eighteen years old. The Evening Post devoted a long editorial to the question whether the English sparrow had been a benefit or a pest. It mentioned a recent discussion of the subject at an ornithological club in Cambridge, Mass., saying: "Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., of this city, gave the birds credit for doing some good, but thought that they often ate the buds of fruit trees, and he says that in Egypt they are wasteful devourers of grain." In Roosevelt's "An Autobiography" a good deal is noted of his ornithological interests during these years; these interests, of course, persisted throughout his life.

S. S. S. Fills Out Hollow Cheeks, Thin Limbs!

Men and women, whether you will ever build yourself up to your normal, just-right weight depends on the number of blood-cells in your blood. That's all there is to it. It's a scientific fact. If your blood-cell factory isn't working right, you will be run-down, thin, your blood will be in disorder, and perhaps your face will be broken out with pimples, blackheads and eruptions. S. S. S. keeps your blood-cell factory working full time. It helps build new blood-cells. That's why S. S. S. builds up thin, run-down people. It puts firm flesh on your bones, it rounds out your face, arms, neck, limbs, the whole body. It puts the "pink" in your cheeks. It takes the hollowiness from the eyes, and it fools Father Time by smoothing out wrinkles in men and women by "plumping" them up. S. S. S. is a remarkable blood-purifier. While you are getting plump, your skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, acne, rheumatism, rash, lefter, blotches are being removed. The medicinal ingredients of S. S. S. are guaranteed purely vegetable. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size is the more economical.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

Conservative reports show that business is decidedly on an up-grade along nearly every line of industry. The fact that buying from hand to mouth in spite of decreasing inventories is one of the most hopeful signs, alnce, while buying is steadily increasing, there is no stocking up in evidence but a healthy growth.

The banks' loans are showing a slight reduction; iron and steel are spreading out; coal carriers take on cargoes at the lakes; improvement in manufacturing lines continues; the canning industry shows marked improvement; the rubber industry is in a good position; grain reserves are low; tobacco has all been sold and generally, the future looks considerable brighter.

Stoves Once Unpopular.

A hundred years ago stoves and fireplaces generally seemed to be the thing that gave decorators of houses the greatest concern.

"The stove," says a German writer, speaking of the house furnishings a hundred years ago, "was quite indispensable in a northern climate, but wherein the whole of antiquity was any reference to be found to a tiled stove? The universal altar had again to be called into service. At Worlitz, for instance, the stove was named the altar of winter, or else was converted into some kind of monument. Isabey hid the stove in his house in Paris under the figure of Minerva."

Who would be without the home town paper?

UNION COLLEGE NOTES

The Young Mother's Health is Most Vital

Hear What Mrs. Ellis Says About It

Covington, Ky.—"During each expectant period I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. My friends were always very anxious about me, but especially the last time, because I was just getting over a case of the flu. But I am happy to say their fears were unfounded. After taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I had no trouble at all and comparatively no suffering. Therefore I know the 'Favorite Prescription' to be good medicine and in my opinion it is the very best thing a prospective mother can take."—Mrs. Alma Ellis, 209 E. 3rd St.

EQUAL TO ALL DEMANDS

When your thoughts turn to spring wraps and you are distracted in trying to choose between the practicality of a coat and the graceful smartness of a cape, remember that it is easy to make a compromise. Some one has foreseen your difficulty in the choice of a wrap for after and wear and solved it for you. The cape coat is here in several delightful variations one of them shown in the illustration.

Wool jersey or any of the soft, lightweight wool coatings, make wraps of this kind. Their capes are lined with crepe or satin, usually in a quiet contrasting color. The model pictured is equal to all weather emergencies. It is fastened with two large buttons and they make, with buttonholes, a smart decorative feature on the cape portion.

Abel's Dream Wife

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union

"Hear him!" spoke Mr. Vance of Brandon and Vance.
"And it's all a delusion, is it?" said Mr. Brandon.

"No, a dream, a beautiful dream, as it seems."

The partners stood on tiptoe just past the threshold of a clouded glass door. In their midst sat a mild-faced, silver-haired man of about thirty, and to what he spoke his employers were listening.

"Yes, friends," Abel Joyce was saying, "the humdrum work gets monotonous sometimes, but you want to look forward to home as the evening haven of rest."

"That's what you do, eh?" chuckled bright and brisk Phil Adler.

"All day long, yes, all day long," repeated Abel with a dreamy smile. "I've told you of our delightful cottage, completely nestled in vines. And the rose bushes! And the new summer house I'm building! I must be setting out the honeysuckles to cover that. And the wife—ah! always at the door waiting for me, with her long flaxen curls, and cheeks and ears pretty as pink seashells."

"It's a fine picture," said Phil.

It was a picture that Abel had been drawing for them almost daily for the past five years.

The young fellow short of cash always won a smile and a handshake from Abel. He was the life and spirit of the place in his gentle yet dominating ways and his employers voted him a treasure of an office superintendent. As the two partners retired toward their private office, Mr. Brandon remarked:

"And you say there's no vine-embowered cottage?"

"None in the world."

"And no wife?"

"That's further away than the other."

"H'm! What's the idea?"

"A good man sustaining a severe disappointment through a fiction. Over ten years ago our Joyce was engaged to a young lady in a little village. Her mother became helpless. The young lady decided to devote herself to her cure while she lived."

"Quite a romance."

"Miss Rachel Waldron, that was her name, found an opportunity to arrange for her mother in a new climate by also nursing a wealthy lady invalid. She went away. Joyce came to the city. The years have drifted by. All poor Joyce has had to make his life endurable is a sweet memory, a vague hope."

"And the young lady, this Miss Waldron?"

"Is in your private office now."

"You amaze me. Her mother is at last dead and her other patient has left her rich."

And there in the office Mr. Brandon was introduced to the dream wife of Abel Joyce.

"You are sure he has not forgotten me?" she had asked Mr. Vance, and then he told her of the vine-embowered cottage.

"And to prepare this strange surprise you suggest it would not be unwomanly on my part?" she pleaded, blushing.

"It would give to dear loyal Abel the heaven he has dreamed of all these years," was the fervent reply.

So a plot was up against Joyce he never suspected.

Two afternoons later Abel Joyce was summoned to the office of the firm to find that it was the tenth anniversary of his service in the business and all hands had contributed to a testimonial in the shape of a handsome watch.

"It's in order for me to invite you all to a dinner this evening," said Abel.

A jolly group, they left the office at the quitting time, Abel was amazed to find himself hustled into a bus at the curb.

"Hold on!" he cried, "we don't want to ride. It's only a block to the restaurant."

"We're going to no restaurant," declared Phil, holding tightly to his bewildered friend. "We're going to celebrate this festive occasion by going to your home."

"Yes, yes, that's it!" chorused the crowd—"vine-covered cottage, honeysuckles, roses—and Mrs. Joyce. We'll tell your good wife what a royal grand fellow you really are!"

In vain did the disuayed and mortified Abel remonstrate.

"Friends," he said, "I'm a fraud—I own no vine-embowered cottage!"

"Nonsense!" cried Phil; "look there—your name on that gate plate; 'Abel Joyce!'"

Sure enough there it was, Abel gasped. And there was a cottage covered with vines, and a summer house—he rubbed his eyes. He staggered as at the steps he was met by his two smiling employers.

Mr. Vance led him into the hall, ushered him into a prettily furnished parlor and closed the door.

"I'm dreaming!" cried Abel, and fell to a chair trembling all over for there, confronting him, "auburn curls, and cheeks and ears like a pink seashell" was his old love, Rachel!

"Abel, have you remembered me?" she cried longingly.

"Remember you!" he fairly sobbed—"oh, every hour! every minute! What does it mean?"

"That your dream has come true," and she told him of her fortune and the surprise she had planned.

And the anniversary dinner was changed into a wedding supper, and Vance and Brandon gave Abel and his happy bride a month's honeymoon.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE

XXXIX.—DAKOTAS

NORTH and South Dakota formed the northern section of the Louisiana Purchase by the acquisition of which from France the United States nearly doubled its size.

The Dakotas were the last states which were made up wholly from this purchase, to become a part of the Union. Shortly after its acquisition, the Lewis and Clark expedition was sent out to explore it and they spent their first winter in 1804 near Mandan. The British had many fur posts in this region, and as they considered it part of British territory, they built a fort in 1810 near Pembina. British rights, however, were withdrawn in the Treaty of 1818, which established the formal boundary between the United States and Canada.

THE Sioux Indians, who had been very hostile toward white invasion finally ceded a portion of their land to the government in 1851. This was opened up to settlement and thus immigration was started in this part of the country. In 1854 the section west of the Missouri river became a part of Nebraska territory, while the portion to the east was attached to Minnesota. However, in 1861, the separate Territory of Dakota was organized. Population did not increase rapidly, until 1886, due to the warlike demonstrations of the Indians.

It is from these Indians that the name Dakota comes.

But it was not until 1889 that the Dakota territory was divided and formed into two states. To avoid any feeling of jealousy as to which was made a state first, the two bills were signed by President Harrison after they had been shuffled up and were then re-shuffled so it is not known which was signed first. Their areas are about the same, North Dakota containing 70,837 square miles, while South Dakota has 77,615 square miles. The population is also about equal and each is entitled to five presidential electors.

XLVI.—NEW MEXICO

AS ITS name implies, New Mexico's history is closely allied with Old Mexico. It was the Spanish who were its first explorers, De Vaca visiting this region in 1536 and Coronado four years later. The natives were the Pueblo Indians, although they are sometimes erroneously reputed to have been Aztecs as they were well advanced in the arts and had a comparatively high civilization. These Indians were conquered in 1598 by Juan de Onate and became subject to Spanish rule, being forced to work the mines and pay tribute. Missions were established and Santa Fe was founded about 1605.

Except for a period of ten years when the Indians revolted and maintained their independence, New Mexico remained under Spanish control until in 1821 Mexico gained its independence from Spain and New Mexico became a province of Mexico. Thus it remained until the outbreak of the Mexican war, when in 1846 Colonel Kearny marched from Fort Leavenworth with his troops, occupied Santa Fe and declared this region a part of the United States. By the Treaty with Mexico in 1848, the upper part of the state was formally ceded to the United States and the Territory of Mexico was organized in 1851, which reached from Texas to California.

Arizona was set off from New Mexico in 1863 and a few years later a portion was contributed to Colorado. Application for admission as a state started in 1850, but it was not until 1910 that New Mexico became the forty-seventh state.

New Mexico ranks fourth in size among the states with an area of 122,034 square miles, but is sparsely populated and accordingly has only three electoral votes for President.

Ah! That's Real Paint

As you dip your brush into the heavy lead body of

KURFEES
Pure Paint

you instantly realize why it covers (hides) and protects the surface so much better. There isn't any magic about it—Kurfees is just better paint. Good painters use and recommend it because it contains more pure lead per gallon. Look at the formula:

Pure Carbonate Lead - 80%
Pure Zinc Oxide - 20% 100%

It's surprising the small amount of Kurfees required to paint a house right. Let us figure the amount for you and show you the beautiful color selections.
